Padgham Fined Him $1,000

Joseph S. N. Holmes, who was held responsible for the murder of A. B. Johnson, a motorman in Grand Rapids many years ago, is now an inmate of the Kalamazoo insane asylum, having suffered a mental collapse.

About 14 years ago Holmes made his mistake. He and Johnson were boarding at a house on Ottawa street. Johnson was a motorman and Holmes, who had been a student at Ann Arbor, was getting practical experience in electrical work in Grand Rapids.

On this fatal day Johnson, who was a practical joker, thrust his cold hand down the young man's neck. Holmes became wild with rage and he rushed upstairs to his own room and seized his revolver. Johnson was leaning over the wash bowl and Holmes pressed the muzzle of the gun against the motorman's head and fired Johnson died instantly.

Before Judge Burlingame in the superior court at Grand Rapids, Holmes was convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment at Jackson. The supreme court reversed the decision and the case went back to the Kent circuit court, from which a change of venue to Allegan was secured. Judge Padgham fined Holmes $1,000 upon his plea of manslaughter. The young man's father suffered financially through his efforts in saving his son from a life sentence in Jackson.

The rash deed, no doubt had its effect in unbalancing the young man's mind.

Team Gave Former Holland Man Slip

Albert Koning, formerly of Holland but now living at Peach Belt where he has a fine farm, had an experience the other day which he does not wish repeated. While bringing a load of wood to Douglas to the home of his father-in-law Mr. White, his horses took a notion to enjoy the beautiful day by taking a walk. Albert in the meantime was talking politics with his dad. When ready to leave he noticed his team was missing. In the meantime the horse with the half laden wagon were on a brisk trot for home passing other rigs and reaching their destination without an accident. The good housewife was greatly perturbed to find the horses without her spouse and thought something must have happened to him on the way. She quickly hitched up one of the team to a buggy and with a lantern in hand started back up the road. After driving considerable distance she distinguished a light coming up the lane. Shortly afterward she espied her husband looking into the fence corners and hedges for the missing team. He was completely exhausted having hunted for seven miles before he was picked up by his dutiful wife.

Appointed Keeper

The many friends of George C. Robinson who has been a lifesaver at the local station when Capt. Morton, Al Tanner and Nick Whelan were at the station, will be pleased to learn that he has just been appointed keeper of the Plum Island station on the west shore of Lake Michigan.

This promotion is one that is richly deserved, no man in the service having been more faithful in the discharge of his duties than has Mr. Robinson. He has seen 21 years service in the lifesaving business during which time he has acquired a thorough knowledge of the work and methods employed. For four years past he has been No. 1 surfman of the Ludington station. The Holland station as did all the life saving stations on the big lakes, closed last night at 12 o'clock.

Allegan Paper Discontinued

The Allegan Gazette has purchased the plant and business of the Allegan Press. The two papers will be merged into one under the management of Mr. Edway Reid the present publisher of the Gazette. The field in Allegan was not large enough for the two papers.

Be sure and attend John Vander Sluis' Cloak Sale. Some rare bargains in Cloaks where there are only one of a kind, both in Ladies and childrens. A line of childrens cloaks that were $2.50, $3, and $3.50 to be closed out for $1.50 each.

That Minstral Show.

When you ask a business man "how did you like the Minstral Show last evening?" they all say fine, or they greet you with a smile and say, "fine business" and you know what he means. The K. of P. Minstrels went off with a "biff bang" and sailed along smoothly until the close, with three hours of solid fun.

The house was well filled despite the stormy weather. Although but three weeks had been expended for rehearsals the program went through without a hitch.

Henry Meengs, James Williams, John Van Vyven and Petz Kramer

E. P. Davis

were ideal end men and their jokes and puns were responded to with bursts of applause. All receiving encores when their numbers, consisting of Comedians were rendered.

The ballad part of the show was handled by W. J. Fenton of Grand Rapids, Laverne Jones and Ben Mulder, all were well received and responded to encores. Mr. Fenton was especially fine, being called back for a third time.

In the Olio part of the program, Miss Lucile Mulder appeared for the first number, not without that she is only sixteen years old and this being her first appearance in public she rendered Bonnie Sweet Bessie, a scottish ballad by J. L. Gilbert in a way that touched the hearts of her audience, and was called back, responding with Violets by Ellen Wright. She was ably accompanied by Mrs. Fred Bloomers.

William Vander Hart who came next on the program impersonated in a pleasing way a school board meeting in a country school district.

John Hyman and Dugan and Smith made the hit as funny men, Hyman coming out with a monologue and a whistling stunt that would compare favorably with the work of good professionals. Dugan and Smith simply "took the house down" and ran out of material.

After the Olio came the moving picture films of Damon and Pythias, a story upon which the K. of P. lodge is founded. The picture alone are worth the price of admission and one seeing them will leave the hall a better man for having seen them.

The man largely responsible for the success of the evening is E. P. Davis the Director, who has spared no effort to make it a success. He was ably supported by Ed Westveer Wm. Orr, Frank Congleton, Charles Floyd and Dr. F. M. Gillespie. The cast consists of Dr. Gillespie, Interlocutor, Meengs, Kramer Van Vyven and Williams End men; Chorus, Dryer, McElrath, Van Kolken, Hyman, Muste, Garvelink, L. Mulder, B. Mulder, H. Wilson, Vander Meulen, Siersma, Smith and Jones. The accompanists were Ed Stephan, Hazel VanLandegand, Miss Anna Shulke, Mrs. Charles Mulder and Mrs. Fred Bloomers.

This entertainment will be repeated tomorrow, Friday evening.

Minstral Show will be repeated tomorrow, Friday night.

Kenyon $15 Men's Suits

When you seek economy, ask your merchant to show you this $15 Suit. Compare it with one that costs $25, and see wherein lies the difference. It does not lie in the wearing qualities, surely not in the style and fit. The great difference is one of price, caused by more than one reason—made in the largest factories of their kind in the world.

HOW RICE PAPER IS MADE

Pulp of Aralia Tree is Used and Not Rice as is Popularly Supposed.

The so-called rice paper is not made from rice, as its name implies, but from the snow white pith of a small tree belonging to the genus Aralia, a genus represented in this country by the common sarsaparilla and the spikenard. The tree grows in Formosa, and, so far as is known, nowhere else.

The stems are transported to China and there the rice paper is made. It is used, aside from a number of other purposes, by the native artists for water color drawings, and sometimes it is dyed in various colors and made into artificial flowers.

The tools of the pith worker comprise a smooth stone about a foot square and a large knife or hatchet with a short wooden handle. The blade is about a foot long, two inches broad and nearly half an inch thick at the back, and it is as sharp as a razor.

Placing a piece of the cylindrical pith on the stone, and his left hand on the top, the pith worker will roll the pith backward and forward for a moment until he gets it in the required position.

Then, seizing the knife with his right hand, he will hold the edge of the blade, after a feint or two, close to the pith, which he will keep rolling to the left with his left hand until nothing remains to unroll; for the pith has, by the application of the knife, been pared into a square white sheet of uniform thickness. All that remains to be done is to square the edges.

If one will roll up a sheet of paper, lay it on the table, place the left hand on top and gently unroll it to the left he will have a good idea of how the feat is accomplished.

FIND ROOM FOR THIN FOLKS

Traveling Man Saves Hour's Time Because He Gets In With Herd of Cassiuses.

"Because I am thin myself and was fortunate enough to strike a bunch of lean folks I saved an hour's time on my last trip to Boston," said the traveling man.

"About two hours before train time I went over to Harvard sightseeing. A guide who conducts tourists through the university buildings in groups of 20 had just rounded up the regulation number, and was starting out on a trip, but when he saw me and two other lantern jawed chaps like into view he called out: 'Come on, you three; there's room for you also.'"

"Before we had passed the second exhibit the head guide came up, counted us, and reprimanded our guide for exceeding the number."

"That's all right," said our man. "They're all thin."

"Apparently that excuse was satisfactory to the head guide, for he nodded and went away, but it caused the herd of Cassiuses to clamor for further explanation. They got it."

"Visitors can see and hear satisfactorily only at a certain distance from the exhibits," he said. "Fat people take up so much room that in a big party some one is sure to be crowded out, but thin folks like you can squeeze up close, and two or three more do not inconvenience anybody."

"When we came out an hour later we met the next party just going in. If I had been fat I should have had to waste all that time waiting for them."

Fossils and Gold.

In Alaska the bones, and often the entire bodies of extinct animals, such as the mammoth, the mastodon, the reindeer, and the bison, are found most abundantly in layers of soil directly above gold bearing gravels. So intimate is this association between fossil animal remains and auriferous deposits that one scientist, who has lately explored Alaska, says fossils serve prospectors as indexes of the metallic richness of the soil. In ancient times both the gold and the bones and bodies of the animals were deposited at the bottoms of valleys by action of rivers and smaller streams, many of which have now disappeared. Consequently the appearance of fossils is, it is claimed, an almost certain indication that gold will be found in the neighborhood. The cabins of many miners are ornamented with huge tusks and antlers unearthed in the diggings.

Old Skewers.

A novel present given to a bride-to-be at a housekeeping shower was a set of four old silver skewers. The handles were quaintly carved and always a matter of admiration and comment when drawn from a roast by the host.

So delighted was the giver by the success of her present that she has started collecting them in antique shops and on old farms and tumble-down houses on her travels. The advantage of such a collection is that it has not been done to death, so valuable finds are more probable.

Death for Bacteria.

Bacteria that survive in sunlight are killed by the ultra-violet rays from mercury-vapor lamps with quartz tubes. Two French investigators report that the killing is not due to the formation of hydrogen peroxide or other chemical poison, but to the direct action of ultra-violet rays of extremely short wave-length. Such rays, abundant in artificial light from the quartz lamps near at hand, are filtered from sunlight by passage through the atmosphere.

PLEASURES OF ANTICIPATION

Desire is Much, but Realization is Less Colorful and Pleasurable.

The housewife who complained that she "had longed for ten years to possess a brass bed, but now that she can get one she discovers that she wants a Napoleon bed in mahogany," has unwittingly summed up the whole phenomenon of human life. Practically all of our pleasures come from anticipation. Realization is much less colorful and pleasurable. The woman who had pictured for years a nice solid brass bed sitting on her rose-toned carpet beside the mahogany dressing table, and had warmed her spirit in the roseate flames of that anticipation, has practically exhausted all the possibilities in the ownership of such a treasure. The treasure itself amounts to much less.

It is so with life. In youth we look forward longingly to the day when we can buy all the chocolate creams that we can eat, but on arriving at that delectable estate we discover that very few satisfy us. Anticipation dwelt upon a big round seal muff, but realization shows us that round muff is passe, and that, besides, milk is the thing. We dream of an automobile—and before it is realized the flying machine appears on the horizon. Desire is much; realization is little. Give us our anticipations.

HOW THE EYES ARE ABUSED

Headaches, Which Often Mean Eye Strain, Put Down to Liver or Indigestion.

Many a woman who takes great care of her diamonds lets her eyes take care of themselves, often to their lasting injury. Seldom, too, are the eyes of young people watched as they should be. Headaches, which may and often do mean eye strain, are put down to liver trouble or indigestion, and home remedies are administered for these ailments when what is really needed is a visit to the oculist. And going to an optician merely is not enough, since his business is to suit the eye with glasses only—which they may or may not need. The oculist suits the treatment to the eye, and it is better to err on the side of going to him without reason than to stay away when there may be need to go.

Considering the delicate mechanism of the eye, it is astonishing how much abuse it bears. Women go about peering through veils of heavy and intricate patterns, most harmful to the vision. Both men and women read constantly in street cars, than which nothing is worse. Children are allowed to read in insufficient light and in the gloaming. And seldom indeed does anyone take care, when reading or working, to be in the right position with regard to the light.

Wanted to Be Sure.

Bret Harte at one time used to plunder the people from the rostrum in the way of 50-cent lectures, says a magazine writer. During a trip over the Pennsylvania circuit he found himself one evening in a small town, the very atmosphere of which was depressing. Turning to the committeeman who awaited on him at his room in the hotel, Harte said: "Is this a healthful climate?" "Passably," responded the committeeman. "What's the mortality of this city?" "About one a day," "About one, eh," said Harte. "Come this way a minute," and he drew the committeeman into the recess of the bay window and then said to him, solemnly, "Is the man dead for today? I am going to lecture here tonight, and it would be a great relief to me to know that I could get through alive."

Exercise as a Bad Habit.

Regular physical exercise of the artificial kind is a habit which, just like the moderate use of light alcoholic beverages, has certain advantages, but which must also be held within the closest limits unless the disadvantages are to be greater. Certainly it is no less artificially introduced into our social life, and in this case too it is just as wise not to allow it to become a habit. To wander through the country on a fine day is a beautiful inspiration and healthful for every one. To need the walk with mechanical regularity is the product of bad training, and to become the slave of Swedish gymnastic apparatus is no better than slavery to cigars.—From Munsterberg's Problems of Today.

Hereditary Talent.

From the postoffice steps Freeman Davis watched Professor Lane cross the road and enter the wheelwright's shop on the opposite side.

"Goes in an' out free as you or me," Mr. Davis remarked to Jabez Sewall, "an' nobody knows how many letters he's entitled to write after his name." Jabez nodded. "But what I can't just make out is how he come by all his smartness. Far's I know, none of his forbears ever amounted to much in a literary way."

"What you talkin' about?" Mr. Davis demanded, warmly. "You know's well's I do that his father could spell Nebuchadnezzar quicker'n any other boy in school!"—Youth's Companion.

He Loves Me, He Loves Me Not.

"God doesn't love me any more," sobbed Mary to her mother one day. "Why, dear, God loves everybody; what do you mean?" "Oh, no, he doesn't love me, I'm sure, for I tried him with a daisy."—Metropolitan Magazine.

When to Eat Fruit

To obtain the most benefit from the succulent fruits they should be eaten at the end of the chief meal. Bananas are an exception, and may be eaten with any meal. They are very acceptable cut in thin slices and eaten with bread and butter. Stewed fruits often have their virtues wasted through being eaten at the wrong time. Six or eight stewed prunes half an hour before breakfast are beneficial; so are stewed figs or stewed apples eaten before breakfast.

Peeled oranges cut into thin slices so that the juice is set free, with castor sugar strewn over the slices, are not unlike pineapple, and form a highly efficacious aid to digestion. Grapes should never be eaten except after the chief meal of the day. Taken when the stomach is comparatively empty, they are a specially harmful fruit.—Family Doctor.

The historic town of Bladensburg, Md., had a good bit of fun poked at it by reason of its alleged sleepiness. The merchant yawned, stretched himself, half opened his eyes, and then, in the most injured tone, said: "Gee whiz. Ain't there nobody that sells milk in this town but me?"

Only Vaccination has Prevented Spread of Smallpox

Holland citizens may well congratulate themselves that the city is still free from smallpox. Considering the number of cases that have appeared in other cities, only the prompt measures taken by the health officers all over the state to vaccinate all suspected cases and the urging of a general vaccination has kept the disease down, for it has been proven time and time again that vaccination is the only positive safeguard.

Our present security, however, is no excuse for failure to make security perpetual. Vaccination has come to be accepted as a proper and advantageous preventive. The experience of the nation and the world makes this point self evident. We recommend consideration of the following editorial, from a recent number of the Outlook, to every man and every woman in whom abides a physical fear of the advisability of submitting to the vaccination of city and state authorities:

"The reason why people can fear vaccination is that they have been delivered by vaccination from the far more consuming fear of smallpox."

"They do not know what smallpox is, what a horror it has been in past ages. In England in the eighteenth century smallpox caused one-tenth of the entire mortality. It was more prevalent than tuberculosis is now. It was a disease of childhood because almost everybody had it, and after having it either died or remained during adult life immune from further attack."

"In 1722, out of the 2,515 inhabitants of Ware, England, 1,601 had had smallpox. Then came an epidemic which left but 302 who had never had the disease."

"In Chester, England, in 1774, only 7 per cent had never had smallpox. About a score of years earlier, Boston had a population of 15,684. After an epidemic during which over 5,000 caught the disease, over 2,000 became inoculated and nearly 2,000 fled from the city, only 174 people were left who had never had smallpox. The royal family was as susceptible to it as the household in a hovel. So the hideous tale might be extended."

"Smallpox, unchecked by vaccination, was indeed hideous, not only in its prevalence, but in its character. What is the difference now? Now it is virtually unknown. There are many physicians who have never seen a case."

"In Prague before vaccination, every death in 12 was from smallpox; after vaccination only one in 457; and the disappearance of smallpox varies in proportion to the extent of the vaccination."

"Between 1893 and 1897 the number of deaths in Russia, which is now thoroughly vaccinated, numbered 275,502; in Germany, which is very well vaccinated. Since 1874 Germany has had no smallpox epidemic. In Philadelphia, between 1901 and 1905, there were 500 deaths from smallpox—but not one in a single case where the patient had been successfully vaccinated within 10 years. So the figures might be multiplied; they can be obtained."

"And what, then, of the ill consequences of vaccination? Out of 6,739,902 primary vaccinations, there were only 476 deaths which in any way could be attributed to vaccination—about seven-thousandths of 1 per cent! That is less fatality than accompanies the use of chloroform."

"In Germany it has been shown that compulsory vaccination involves less danger than voluntary school attendance. As for the conveyance of disease through vaccination, that may be disregarded if the vaccination is done with the same care with which any such slight operation should be performed."

"With the pure vaccine now obtainable proper care will protect the abrasion made from vaccination as it will protect any other. Much of the opposition to vaccination is the same sort as is directed against serum therapy. To call the serum or the vaccine an impurity is to beg the question. If it is to give the blood corpuscles greater power of resistance it is no more impurity than the food we put into our mouths. It is against nature only in the sense in which all civilized life is against nature."

"Sanitation prevents smallpox as much as it will prevent yellow fever—that is, not at all. To ascribe vaccination to the desire of physicians for fees does not call for answer. No one can indict a whole people, or an entire profession. As for personal liberty, the community is constantly interfering with personal liberty. It can prevent suicide; it can stop a man from throwing his children before a moving train; it can keep confined anyone who throws explosives about."

"A man's blood is not his own any more than his hands are his own to do with them what he will. If his hands or his blood should become a menace to the community, the community has a right to place him under restraint. This the courts have decided again and again."

"The effort of men and women wholly untrained in modern physiological and medical science to substitute their own fears or notions or theories for the results of years of patient research on the part of scientific investigators should be as vigorously resisted as the effort of men and women untrained in engineering problems to decide as to the safety of a great public structure. Let us be thankful, however, that smallpox is so distant an evil that people can actually become excited over vaccination!"

While there may be some natural and honest differences of opinion regarding the question of vaccination, the fact remains that in Germany, with its 50,000,000 population, there are fewer cases of smallpox annually than in the ordinary American city of 50,000. That this is due to vaccination is generally admitted. It is true that the sanitary conditions are better in the German empire than here, but the disease has no terrors for the Germans, because it never gets a real foothold and never amounts to an epidemic. Vaccination is compulsory, and for that reason every precaution having been taken against smallpox, the Germans go about their business absolutely insured against any kind of disturbance from this source.

The response on the part of the people of this state to the recommendations made by the various health boards is said to have been cheerful, and it is estimated that hundreds of thousands of persons have already availed themselves of the opportunity thus afforded to join the sore-arm brigade.

One feature in connection with the present general vaccination program is that the people of this state will be largely immune from smallpox in the future, and in proportion to the thoroughness of the present campaign will depend the spread of the malady in the future.

Every locality in the state has offered free vaccination to those who are unable to pay for it, and while a few physicians have been reported as opposed to such a program, it may be set down that any doctor who objects to free vaccination for those unable to secure that protection otherwise, if he believes in vaccination at all, is a disgrace to his profession and regards dollars as of far greater importance than lives. The safety of the various communities is the first consideration, and there is no question but that the gratuitous service offered will be taken advantage of by many persons who are unable at the moment to raise the necessary fee.

There are still in Holland a good many people, largely adults, who have not been vaccinated. They are not only subjecting themselves and their families to this dread disease, but others as well, and there should be no delay in having a physician slit your arm. If there are any persons who are hesitating because of the trifling expense no doubt if they report to the proper authorities, say the mayor, the aldermen or the city physician, they will be promptly and willingly cared for.

What a Farmer Can Buy

How would you like to be a farmer these days? A farmer's wife can take a couple of dozen of eggs to market and take back home material for a new dress. Two pounds of butter will buy her a pair of kid gloves or a shirt waist. A couple of chickens will buy an up-to-date hat. A turkey will buy the little girl a coat or dress or the little boy a good suit. A couple bushels of wheat or corn buys father a pair of pants or a pair of shoes, and a load of wood would buy the son a good suit or overcoat. The ordinary town man has to work all day to take home to his family two pounds of butter and a couple of dozen of eggs, and all week for a load of wood and a turkey. And yet many of our farmer boys, and their dads, too, are clamoring to go to the city to live; and yet, well, you know the rest.

The days are shortest in December, and so are a good many men—say, along about the twenty-fifth.

How Prices Went Up

A city man went into the country for the summer. He found a model dairy farmer was one of his neighbors. He went to the farm after milk, and on the way saw a herd of sleek, well-fed, and clean cows. Much encouraged, he approached the manager.

"My servant will come to you each morning for three quarts of milk," he said.

"All right; it will be eight cents a quart."

"And I want your best milk," added the city man.

"Ten cents a quart," said the dairyman.

"That's all right," said the city customer.

"So long as my servant can see your man milk the cow, that price will be all right."

"Fifteen cents a quart" from the dairyman broke off the negotiations.

Drives Twenty Million Pegs

This city numbers among its residents a modest shoemaker, who has been on the job for nearly three score years. Henry Iliohan, a Hollander by birth, started to learn the cobbler's trade when a mere boy of twelve years and nothing since has tempted him to change his vocation. Mr. Iliohan was born in Zutphen, province of Gelderland, Netherlands, in 1841, and although he has nearly reached the allotted span of three score and ten years he is good for many additional years of service in his chosen trade. Mr. Iliohan left the Netherlands in 1873 and came to America. He settled in New Holland. After eight years he came to Holland and still is pegging away in the shop at 134 East Eighth street, which has been his business stand for thirty years. Although Mr. Iliohan will not venture a statement as to how many pairs of shoes he has tapped during his fifty-seven years' career, a conservative estimate would place the number at 100,000, and allowing on the average 100 nails to a shoe the number of pegs driven by him would reach 20,000,000,000.

Must Stand Examination

Those Allegan people who raised such a row a short time ago over the assistant postmastership of this city will have to back up a little according to the new ruling. Assistant postmasters who hope to be transferred into the permanent service of the government under the civil service order recently issued by President Taft must first stand a rigid examination as to their efficiency. The postmaster-general does not intend that any drones or favored relatives who are not up to the standard that should be required of assistant postmasters shall be transferred to the permanent rolls by the "blanket" process. Each appointee must prove his worth before he will be allowed to enter the classified service.—Allegan News.

Attorneys Indorse Judge Padgham

Representatives of the Ottawa county bar met at the court house Friday afternoon and adopted strong resolutions indorsing Philip Padgham as a candidate for renomination to the judgeship of Allegan-Ottawa circuit. The resolution called upon the people of the two counties to place Judge Padgham in nomination at the primaries next spring and to support him at the election. The members of the Ottawa county bar spoke highly of Judge Padgham both as a man and a judge, and the sentiments expressed at the meeting voiced the sentiments of the profession in regard to the man who has occupied the bench with credit to himself and the circuit for many years.

Judge David F. Hutton, one of the oldest members of the bar in Ottawa county, president of Fridays meeting, and Raymond Visscher of Holland acted as secretary. Congressman Diekema of Holland was also present.

Plans were also discussed for the permanent organization of the Ottawa county bar and Dan F. Pagelsen, Louis H. Osterhaus and George E. Kollen were appointed as a committee to formulate plans of the permanent organization.

Twelve attorneys were present at the meeting and the legal profession of Ottawa county was well represented at the gathering.

Change Michigan Bounty Laws

Michigan's bounty law will be subjected to important changes by the next legislature, according to the present outlook. A prominent state official has asked the advice of the department of agriculture about changes which should be made. This may be incorporated in a model bill, which will be introduced in the legislature. The necessity for a change in the law has been brought out by Uncle Sam's recent investigation into the wolf question.

At present the Michigan bounty law stands as an attractive bait for all the wolves and coyotes within shipping distance. The bounty for a grown wolf, $25, is the largest offered by any state in the union. Wisconsin pays $10 for a full grown wolf, and $4 for a whelp. Michigan pays $10 for a whelp. Minnesota is even more economical than Wisconsin, with a bounty of $7.50 for a full grown wolf and $3 for a whelp.

Obviously this difference in bounty tends to encourage the shipment of scalps from Wisconsin into Michigan, and it is accepted among the federal experts as beyond question that the three states ought to work in harmony as to the amount of bounty offered for the various kinds of noxious animals. The result may be an interstate conference between the interested officials, with a view to making the bounties uniform. Another illustration of discrepancy, although one of less importance, is that Wisconsin pays $3 a scalp for both wild cat and lynx, while Michigan pays $5 for a lynx and $3 for a wild cat.

An important development which emphasizes the necessity for readjustment in the Michigan bounty law is the apparently authentic discovery of coyotes in Menominee county, Michigan. The biological survey has received two coyote skins from the county clerk. Hitherto the federal authorities have been doubtful of coyote skins alleged to have been taken from animals captured from Michigan. Such skins have usually been presented to county clerks in not too good condition, and such as have reached Washington were sufficiently ancient and weather beaten to have made a trip from the southwestern desert country. Moreover, authentic records have heretofore confined the coyote to limits at least 100 miles west of Menominee county.

But the two skins just received were in excellent condition, and were accompanied by the skulls, by the aid of which identification was established beyond the least question. This apparently indicates that the coyotes has extended its range easterly. The federal officials intend to learn definitely whether this is so.

A plan is now being considered to have Clarence Birdseye, who is now trapping timber wolves in the upper peninsula, go into Menominee county and trap for coyotes. If he catches any, this will be taken as final proof that the coyotes' range has been extended. Under any circumstances, the chances are that it is only a matter of time before the coyote ranges over the greater part of the upper peninsula, and perhaps over the lower peninsula as well. Formerly the coyote did not get east of Minnesota, but with the cutting of timber he has swept over the greater part of Wisconsin. It is his evident inclination to go where man goes, providing the settlements are not too dense.

The Michigan legislature will have to face the coyote question, anyhow. It is far from certain then the $25 bounty was intended to apply to coyotes. When it was originally written into the Michigan statutes, the people of Michigan knew little about coyotes. The law was made to provide a bounty on "wolves" without saying what kind of wolf was meant. Undoubtedly the legislators had the timber wolf in mind, for that was the sort of wolf that had made trouble for the people in Michigan. But the coyote is a wolf in the scientific sense quite as much as the timber wolf. The coyote is the plains wolf. So Michigan's good money is being paid out for a bounty on coyotes, many of which may not have been natives of Michigan at all.

Even if it is conclusively found that coyotes are now making their abode in Michigan, the legislators must consider whether they wish to pay the same bounty for them as for timber wolves, or whether they wish to pay any bounty at all. The two animals are altogether different in size and habits. The coyotes more nearly resembles the fox in size and disposition.

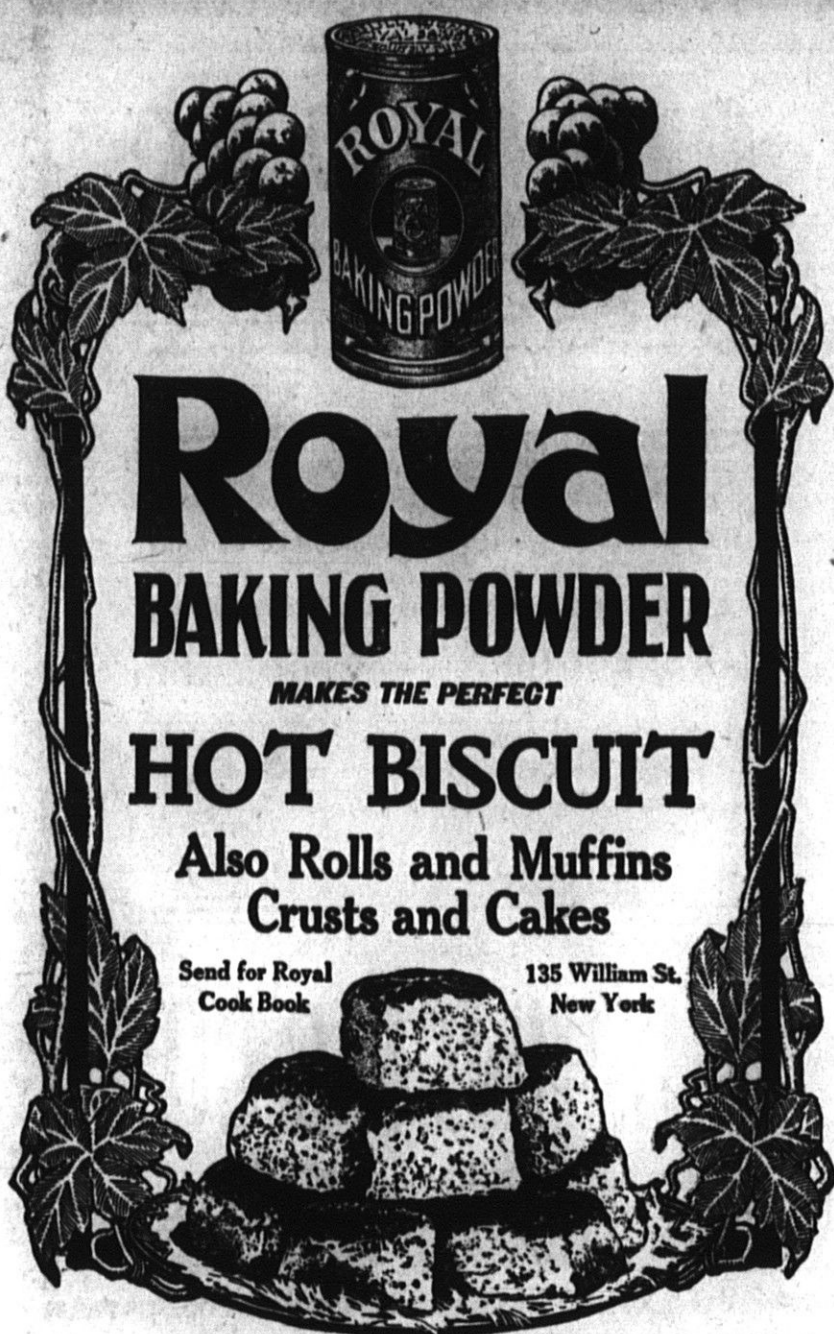

While the timber wolf lives almost exclusively on deer, the coyote is too small to attack a deer, unless it is wounded. The timber wolf keeps as far as possible from human settlements. The coyote fights with the dogs and sneaks up to the garbage can for a midnight lunch. He lives on sheep, pigs, rabbits and other small animals. So, from the farmer's standpoint, it is a bad pest, though it may be doubtful whether coyotes will ever kill as many sheep in Michigan as do the dogs. Coyotes can be fenced against without serious difficulty.

The federal experts do not think much of bounties, but whether they will recommend their complete abolishment in Michigan is doubtful. They recognized the necessity of killing the timber wolves to save the deer, and the early reports from Mr. Birdseye indicate that it may not yet be wise to turn wolf killing over to salaried men in public employ. So for the present it may be desirable that Michigan should continue to pay a bounty on wolves. The sure thing is that the bounty should be made uniform in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, where the species are alike, and the probability is that the Michigan bounty ought to be heavily reduced.

But if the bounty system is continued, the state should certainly take precautions to protect itself against frauds. A good example has been set by Wisconsin. The law there requires that, before a bounty is paid, the skin of the alleged wolf shall be sent to the state university at Madison. There it is examined by a scientist who knows the difference between wolves and all the other animals which are sometimes passed off as wolves. No bounty is paid until he certifies that the pelt is really that of a wolf.

The Michigan law provides a series of checks, but they do not amount to much. The county clerk has the first say then the supervisors may accept his word for it, or they may declare that the animal was not a wolf. After the supervisors, the auditor general has a whack at it. Always the auditor general in Michigan has been more skilled in telling the difference between a republican and a democrat than between a wolf's skin and the pelt of a dog. But the Michigan institutions of learning contain several men well qualified to tell the difference. If the certificates of one of these men are required it may be possible to greatly cut down the amount paid out by the state for wolf bounties—an amount which has been growing startling within the last few years.

Treble Clef Warmly Greeted

The Treble Clef chorus of Holland was greeted by a large audience at the armory Monday night and the concert which the yeiting musicians presented thoroughly pleased the Grand Haven audience. The chorus is composed entirely of women and in the membership are a number of excellent vocalists, who have won considerable local reputation. They have presented several concerts in Holland but Monday nights entertainment was their first appearance in Grand Haven.

Miss Bernice Jones, elocutionist, made a decided impression upon the audience with several clever readings which were very well received. Miss Jones is a clever reader who enters thoroughly and naturally into the spirit of her subjects and brings out the best that is in the lines. She appeared twice on last night's program and was enthusiastically received each time.

The director's offerings were Lyne's "Mavourneen" and Salter's "Song of Autumn."

The chorus numbers offered by Treble Clef were: "Faithful and True" and "Welcome, Pretty Primrose," "In May" and "The Lost Chord," "Summer Fancies," "An Irish Folk Song" and "Dutch Lullaby." The closing number was "The Rose Waltz" by Penschel. Every number was greeted by hearty applause especially "Tripe Trape Trontje" and the cordial welcome accorded them by the Grand Haven audience was a decided encouragement.

The Treble Clef chorus arrived in Grand Haven at about eight o'clock in a special train over the Pere Marquette. The train brought about 175 passengers from Holland, many of whom came to hear the concert.

The Holland party was met at the station by the Grand Haven Concert Band, and escorted to the armory, arriving just in time for the opening of the concert.

Next Wagner Chorus, Dec. 15

The next concert of the Wagner Male Chorus will be the best the club has ever produced the music will be of such a nature that will appeal to any average audience. The club will render several comical numbers that are sure to take as well as some numbers of a higher order. Mr. Wm. E. Vander Hart will be on the program with two readings that will be worth the price of admission alone as Will always knows how to entertain. In addition to the above the management of the club have gone to the heavy expense of bringing to Holland on this occasion a flute soloist, Prof. A. A. Biferina, a Greek musician of wide reputation. It was only through a fortunate circumstance that this soloist was obtainable as he will be in Grand Rapids about this time and the club induced him to play two solo numbers at this concert. The public has shown a great interest in the club and the boys feel that they want to give the music loving public the best they can get. The next concert promises to be a great success and well worth your patronage.

Whitney Quartet Tonight

The Whitney Brothers Male Quartet comes to Holland tonight and the patrons of the Hope College Lecture Course will have a second chance to hear one of the best companies of entertainers on the Lyceum. Last year this quartet took Holland by storm and those who heard them at that time have never stopped praising their talent.

The members of the male quartet are actually brothers. The home is in Rochester, N. Y., where their father holds a Methodist pastorate. If any citation is necessary to disprove bald-headed notion that minister's sons are necessarily bad, the Whitney Brothers are good examples.

They are manly clean fellows, whom it is a joy and uplift to know, if only by a platform acquaintance, and whatever they do is invested by this atmosphere of refinement, dignity and grace. The manager of the company announces that the quartet is ready with a repertoire of classical and popular songs that rival those of any previous engagement, and the Holland patrons who heard the quartet last year and whose elegant elocutionary work has won him an enviable reputation throughout the country, will be here with the goods. In fact the whole quartet is prepared as never before to delight the ear, to warm the heart with an evening's entertainment that is unique, artistic and complete.

First Meeting of the Civic Club

In an address before the Civic club a newly organized organization Mr. Diekema was its first speaker, and gave one of his powerful addresses. His talk gave a vivid understanding on the government of our nation's capital but he spoke more strongly upon the subject of an ideal city such as we are supposed to have. He said in part:—

Holland is not by all means an ideal city said the speaker. If it were there would be no need for a Civic club. The club was organized because the earnest men of the city recognized that there is a crying need here for the organized use of all the best efforts of the city's best citizens for the betterment of conditions.

There are a large number of girls working in the factories of Holland was one of Mr. Diekema's examples in driving home his points. But nothing is done for them. Ten years ago we had an active Y. W. C. A. here that reached many of them. Today with many more girls in need of such an organization we do nothing for them. They are often unavoidably in surroundings that are far from elevating, but the people of Holland do nothing for them and it is to the lasting shame of the city that such conditions exist. The same thing is true of the boys of the city. Nothing is done for them and they are allowed to work out their own salvation as best they can, often with the miserable result of prison bars.

The city of Zeeland, said Mr. Diekema, has set us a worthy example. There they have a civic club, with well equipped club rooms where the young men can go in the evening and play games and get out of the degrading influences of street companions. And in the city of Belding hardly larger than Zeeland there are ideal conditions for the working girls. But in spite of these examples all that the people of Holland are doing is talk about beauty of the city and resting contentedly while every day boys and girls are allowed to work in immoral surroundings.

He Needed the "Dope," Too

An old colored man had a mule that would not move for him. He pulled and dragged his mule until he was exhausted, and finally he sat down and said:

"Well, ole fellow, yo's got de best ob me." There was a drug store across the street and a thought struck him. He went across and said:

"Has yo' got anything dat will make dat mule ob mine go?" The druggist said:

"I don't know. I can try it." He came out and punched a little medicine into the mule's side. The mule commenced to wriggle around, and finally off he started over the side of the hill at a good pace. Sambo watched him for a moment or two and then he ran into the drug store, saying:

"Mister, how much yo' charge for dat medicine?"

"Ten cents."

"Hae yo' any mo'?"

"Yes."

"Den jes' put twenty cents' wuf inter me, so I kin ketch dat mule."

SELF-CONFIDENCE IS WEAKNESS
Matthew 26:31-35, 69-75—December 4
"Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—1 Cor. 10:12.

ST. PETER has proven to be one of the most helpful of Christ's twelve Apostles, and the secret of his assistance lies in the Scriptural revelation of his human nature, its strength and its weaknesses. He was the first of the twelve Apostles to acknowledge the Master as the Messiah, the Sent of God; he was the first of the twelve to deny him. He was the only one of the twelve who drew his sword in the Master's defense and the only one who, later, swore that he never knew him. By Divine arrangement, to him were given the keys with which to open the door to the High Calling—to the Kingdom. At Pentecost he used one of the keys of power and boldly proclaimed to the Jews the opening of the way to glory, honor and immortality.

A little later, at the appointed time, he opened the door to the same High Calling for the Gentiles when, by his preaching, Cornelius, the first Gentile acceptable to God, was received and begotten of the holy Spirit, this fact giving evidence that the middle-wall of partition, previously separating Jew and Gentile, had been broken down. Yet, after all this knowledge and special opportunity, this great man subsequently dissembled to the extent of ignoring God's grace to the Gentiles as being sufficient, discriminating between Jews and Gentiles and their equality before the Lord.

But in all these experiences St. Peter displayed the fact that his heart, at its core, was loyal to God, to truth, to righteousness, and that the weaknesses, the faults, the blemishes of his character were of his flesh and not of his real heart intention. For his denial of the Master he wept bitterly. And for his failure to recognize the Gentiles he made full reparation most humbly.

The same exhibition of human nature which makes the Apostle Peter attractive is that which made David, the Prophet and king of Israel, attractive. He was not so saintly that he could not make a mistake. He was not so far above the remainder of humanity that they could not realize in him a fellow-creature. Yet withal he was not so debased as to make him abhorrent. His weaknesses were fully offset by the abundant evidence of his heart-loyalty to God and to righteousness. His very experiences in stumbling and recovery have so saturated his Psalms that they touch a responsive chord in nearly every heart which is loyal to God and which has had any degree of experience with sin and weakness—its own and those of others.

How Others Saw St. Peter

Peter remains even today the most fascinating of that band of men who surrounded our Lord in the days of his earthly pilgrimage. G. C. Morgan said of Peter: "Now I am convinced that in Peter we have the greatest human revealed in the New Testament. I do not say the greatest man in his achievement or in one particular capacity of his being, but the most wonderful revelation of human nature. This man of intelligence was perpetually making blunders. This man of emotions was guilty of such impulse that he worked harm in the very cause he desired to help."

Of St. Peter Southouse says: "Peter was an average man, and for this reason he comes nearer to us than some of his colleagues do. But average men have their splendid moments, such as when St. Peter tried to walk on the water, for in this action he tried to do a thing for which he seemed to have no abilities. He set out to do something of which he had no experience."

Dr. Davis said about St. Peter: "Peter was intellectual. He asked Jesus more questions than any other of the Apostles. The capacity for asking questions is a revelation of the intellectual. It may also be a revelation of ignorance; but the man who never asks a question is certainly deficient in his intellectuality. . . . Peter was a man of heart, sobbing and impetuous. His virtues and his faults had their common root in his enthusiastic disposition. It is to his praise that, along with the weed of rash haste, there grew more strongly into his life the fair plant of burning love and ready reception of Truth."

"Take Heed to Yourselves"

One of the great lessons which the Master taught his followers, and which all in the School of Christ must learn, is that, with burning love and zeal for God and for righteousness, we should also have moderation—exercising the spirit of a sound mind. Christ's followers are exhorted to be "wise as serpents and harmless as doves." Their wisdom is not to be merely the selfish kind, which would look out for its own interests, but of the generous kind which looks out for the interests of all, and particularly for the interests of the Lord's cause and for any share therein which he may entrust to us.

In the course of his instructions, Jesus had said to his disciples, in advance of the trying hour of his betrayal—"All ye shall be offended because of me this night; for it is written (in the Prophets), I will smite the Shepherd and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad. But after I am risen again I will go before you into Galilee."—Matt. 26:31, 32.

Then spoke the impulsive Peter, "Though all shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended." (V. 33) Alas! how little did this courageous man understand the nature of the trials and difficulties immediately before him, or realize the weak points of his own impulsive nature. Yet if we are grieved with his denial of the Master, we must rejoice to note his faith and love and zeal, as manifested in his acknowledgment of Jesus as the Messiah and his later declaration that nothing should ever shake his loyalty.

However, it is the specially loyal and ardent that the Adversary seeks most persistently to entrap. Thus Jesus, on this very occasion, explained to St. Peter, "Satan hath desired to have thee that he might sift thee" (Luke 22:31); that he might separate you from your loyalty to Christ and discourage you from discipleship, overwhelming you with fear and with your own weaknesses. The Master added, "But I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not." We may well understand that the same loving Master still assists all of his true, warm-hearted followers, whatever their weaknesses of heredity. We may well understand, too, that he is able to develop all such into strong characters, if they abide in his love, continuing in their zeal.

"Before the Cock Crow"

The Master discerned the danger of his loving but impetuous follower, and uttered a warning word, that before cock-crowing he would deny his Master. How improbable this seemed to St. Peter! How he courageously declared, "Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee." And so said all of the eleven. Their hearts were good. And the Lord looketh upon the heart.

Our study now passes to verse 69. The Master had been arrested. The scattered disciples had fled. St. John, because of an acquaintance with the high priest's family, penetrated further into the palace than St. Peter, who stood in the court-yard. A maid of the palace recognized St. Peter as one of Jesus' disciples and so declared publicly. Fearful that he might share the fate of the Master, St. Peter denied his identity, declaring that he knew nothing about the matter. A little later another declared the same.

Peter emphasized his denial with an oath, declaring that he knew not Jesus. Later the word spread throughout the court-yard and many took it up, declaring that they believed what the maid said and that St. Peter had the Galilean dialect, anyway. To emphasize the denial St. Peter began to curse, and to swear that he knew not the man. Directly after, cock-crowing began. Then St. Peter remembered the words of his Master, "Before cock-crowing thou shalt deny me thrice."

Alas! he had been too sure of his own stability, too confident of his loyalty. He was entrapped by the Adversary along the very line of his boasting. Another account says that Jesus turned and looked at Peter! That look was sufficient. It spoke volumes to St. Peter's loyal heart. It was not a look of disdain, nor one of anger, we may be sure. It was a look of loving sympathy. It melted St. Peter's heart. He went out and wept bitterly. The followers of the Master today, beset by weaknesses and frailties and temptations of the Adversary, have the lesson of St. Peter's experience as a warning to be confident in the Lord and to look to him for assistance, rather than to be self-confident. And those who fall today have St. Peter's experience as a lesson of the Lord's sympathy and pity. They, too, should weep bitterly for transgressions and repent and profit by their experience.

Miniature Bomb in Cigars

Harry P. Hines, proprietor of a cigar store in Muskegon, is considering placing his application with some detective agency for a position, as result of a successful piece of sleuth work he has just pulled off. For several weeks past some person or persons had been consistently robbing his store room. He has a cage built in his back room in which he keeps all his superfluous stock, but as this was locked the only way one could get at the cigars was to stand on a ladder and reach over the top. He finally run onto a box near the edge of the cage which had been rifled of 47 smokes. He then took the other 13 and placed two small fire crackers in each one.
One night a prominent Muskegon young man entered he store and went into the back room to get a drink of water, and on coming out pulled a cigar out of his pocket and lighted it. In a few seconds he was greatly surprised at the end of his cigar blowing off. Seemingly not wise to the trick, he lighted the Havana again, when it again blew up. This morning it apparently dawned on him that he had been trapped, as he came in and paid Hines for four boxes of cigars which he had taken in this manner.

May we have YOUR MEASURE?

CLOTHES TO ORDER

Our Tailoring Department is organized to run like clock work. The artistic taste of our cutter, the skill of our tailors and the value of our woollens are all on a par.

Everything is the best money can command. Yet we are not high priced. A tailor should be judged by the clothes he makes, not by the prices he asks. Judge us that way.

We take the risk of pleasing you

Try us on your next suit. Remember the garments are not yours until you say "Perfectly Satisfied."

Tuberculosis

Plenty of fresh air, sleeping out-doors and a plain, nourishing diet are all good and helpful, but the most important of all is

Scott's Emulsion

It is the standard treatment prescribed by physicians all over the world for this dread disease. It is the ideal food-medicine to heal the lungs and build up the wasting body.
